BROLAND AND AUSTRALIA.

the tes mornitation of monitors was into their children distratorial instead of obselications. The last piece of colonial sudadity has come from the Australian colonies. The people of the autpodes appear to have had enough of English convincian—they have longist against it at various tirues, chasing it from the fast, and they have longist against it at various tirues, chasing it from the fast. After a lengthened game of a netting place as the dove first sent from the fast. After a lengthened game of abuttleook had been played between the various colonies and the mother country, the convict element was at length confined to the western coast of Australiant to the settlement of Swan Kiere. From here however, the ticket of leave men and those who had fullified their term, gradually made their way to the more flourishing parts of the country, when marders and robberies became too frequent for even the taste of New came too frequent for even the taste of Net South Wales, and so the colonies have unite South water, and on the continues of the envice system to the Australian continent. The Imperial authorities have tried to tem porise, but in vain; nothing will suit Melbourne, Sydney, Adelaide, and even Brisband. porise, but in vain; mothing will suit Melbourne, Sydney, Adolaide, and evan Brinbane but a total cessation of convict resupertation to Australia. The knotty point of the subpect is that Swan river asks for convicts, and the question is thus the years of the English papera—lass one colony a right to dictate terms not only to the mother constry but to a meighboring officery. This is avidedity a fallacious way of putting the matter. What the several ecolonies protest against is a system of economy between the Imperial authorities and a settlement almost on their borders, by which the moral raini and material injury of erime are introduced into their communities. It is no argument to say that these colonies them. conviction, and take, terespore, make the con-of the system comes from them with any-thing but a good grace. The very lack that they have been so much it earlier period-connected with the cvil is one of the principal causes of their present sensitiveness. They have soon conviction and felt it, and they have some conviolism and felt it, and they know its effects.

Apart, however, from the nature of the question at issue, we are deeply interected in the response of the Home Government to the diotatorial despatches which have been recently forwarded by the Australian colonies. So far as the latter are concerned there is no hope of any modification in their demands. The following from the Melbourne Agg gives some ides, of the intensity of public sentiment on the question:—" We notice sentiment on the question:—" We notice that month the scheme of Air. Edward Wilson, to ship convicts and expirese to England, by way of retaination. It was generally believed to be impracticable, and, under present circumstances, unwarrantable. Although condemned by the greater portion of the public, ournstances, un warrantable. Although condemand by the greater jurition of the public, it had supporters, and several hundred pounds were subscribed to assist the movement. The fact shows the tendency in certain quanters to resort to extreme measures. Should the colonists be exasperated by the obstines; and injustice of the British Government, it is impossible to predict to what lengths the resistance now aroused will go. Kvery one deplores the necessity, but every one, is resoived to prevent this intolerable wrong.⁵ When we couple with this, the determination expressed by the colonies to take away the subsidy from the Ponionalar and Oriental resolved. to prevent this intocareas rong.
When we comple with this, the determination expressed by the colonies to take away the sebeldy from the Pointsular and Oriental Mail company, if they dare to touch at Western Australia, so long as the Anti-contrict demand in not complied with, we can imagine the obstinate and determined ambjects with whom the Imperial authorities have got to deat. We are gired, however, to see that the general tone of the English press, although evincing displeasure at the brusque conduct of the colonist, is in favor of an abaudonment of the system which has created amoet ill-feeling. The question will probably come up before Parliament the sensing sension, when no doubt colonial relations guaranly will be amply diseased. So far as the leaders of British public opinion got present it would soom Grest Britishin' daire is to have the solonies independent allies rather than grumbling dependencies.
